NEWS RELEASE

The Practical Course Alzheimer (PCA) Receives Support from the Davos Alzheimer Collaborative and the Global CEO Initiative on Alzheimer's Disease

MIAMI, FL – May 21, 2025 – The second edition of the Practical Course Alzheimer (PCA) is proud to announce the official support of the Davos Alzheimer Collaborative (DAC) and the Global CEO Initiative on Alzheimer's Disease (CEOi). This innovative and highly practical course, led by Professor James E. Galvin and Dr. Jeffrey Gelblum, will be held on December 12 in Miami, bringing together a multidisciplinary audience dedicated to advancing Alzheimer's care.

The PCA is a unique educational event designed to equip healthcare professionals with hands-on strategies to improve the day-to-day management of Alzheimer's disease. Under the leadership of internationally renowned experts, the course fosters collaboration among neurologists, psychiatrists, geriatricians, and a broad range of allied health professionals to drive real-world impact in Alzheimer's care.

The Davos Alzheimer Collaborative is a global partnership mobilizing the world's leading experts and institutions to accelerate innovation in Alzheimer's care and prevention. The Global CEO Initiative on Alzheimer's Disease unites private sector leaders to advance meaningful solutions in treatment, care, and public policy for Alzheimer's and related dementias.

Together, these organizations and the PCA Course are committed to reshaping the global response to Alzheimer's disease—by empowering professionals on the front lines of care with practical, collaborative tools for better outcomes.
